

Our group in Bangkok seem to be having a good time and for the first time, apparently, have engaged in team sports there. James Harrison Greenwood and Alexander Lee recently participated in the Bangkok 7's rugby tournament at the Royal Bangkok Sports Club, and James even managed to get man of the tournament! Congratulations to all involved.

James' account: "Last weekend both Alex and I played in the annual Bangkok 7's at the Royal Bangkok sports club (<http://www.rbsc.org/home.aspx>). I have been told by locals that it is the most prestigious club in Thailand and celebrating its 135th birthday was originally set up by the Royal Family. The rugby pitch itself was on a golf course, so I think it actually beat Twickenham as it was a dream to play on.

Unlike New York 7's we did not come home with any trophies this time, losing to the Air force in the semi final. As you can see from the attached photos it was a great day of rugby and I ended up getting man of the tournament for the club we played for the 'old Bangkok Bangors' (<http://www.oldbangkokbangers.com/>), I am famous already ha.

The next challenge that James, Joe and Aaron are doing is the Angkor Wat international half marathon (<http://www.angkormarathon.org/>), for which The Mountbatten Institute has given approval for the creation of a tee shirt."
