

Entrepreneurial Alumni

Sarah O' Connell (January 2007 - New York) shares her latest venture with us...

I currently work with The Irish Food Board in London helping Irish food producers to build their business in the UK, but have always been interested in setting up my own business too – think I'm an entrepreneur at heart!

This year I found the opportunity to start my own part-time business in partnership with Arbonne International, an award – winning Swiss health and wellness company that distributes its products via network marketing, or 'word of mouth' advertising. The company has a successful 30-year track record in the US, having won an Ernst & Young award in 2006, and has taken the UK by storm since launching here in 2008.

This is a fantastic opportunity for Mountbatten alumni to earn an additional income stream – and over time create a leveragable asset - by building consumer networks around premium Swiss skincare, cosmetics and nutrition in the booming health and wellness industry.

It's a highly flexible working model which you can easily fit around your current commitments. Successful consultants come from all backgrounds - from doctors and bankers to firemen and teachers.

I'm part of a team of UK consultants whose aim is to empower others to achieve increased financial freedom and business skills by being part of a simple, proven business model in a fun and supportive community. We are currently seeking motivated and enterprising individuals to join our team. If you're curious to know more, information sessions on the business and training opportunities are regularly held in London and nationwide. We'd love to see you there – just get in touch!
